

IN THE NEWS :

PROPERTY COMPETITIONS

Competitions to sell properties are very much in the news. In the current economic climate, competitions are seen as a novel way of generating considerable interest and sometimes achieving a sale for a figure that is in excess of the market value.

Unfortunately, many competitions fall foul of the UK gambling laws because they are in effect run as a lottery. This places the organisers at risk of prosecution and a substantial fine.

We have advised the organisers of many competitions up and down the country on the legality of schemes, designing terms and conditions as well as assisting in the content of suitable questions.

As a law firm who specialise in both Gambling and Property law, Horse Lightly Fynn is ideally placed to try and ensure that competitions are run in a safe and legal way as well as undertake the necessary conveyancing work.

With experience in the areas of Gambling, Licensing, Property and Town and Country Planning, Horse Lightly Fynn are nationally recognised as a specialist practice and have been ranked by the Chambers and Partners Guide to the Legal Profession as in the top tier of law firms for licensing in the south.

Being in the top tier does not mean that our fees are also in the top tier – in fact, they are comparable with other regional firms and lower than some other specialists.

Our existing client base ranges from well-known national and regional firms to smaller businesses and individuals. If you have not used us before, why not give us a try and see why these people prefer to engage us ?
